2025 Spring Season Outlook:

This spring, the Nittany Lions will return 15 players, including 7 of 9 starters from last year's World Series Championship Game. On the mound, the team will rely on senior ace Brady Palmer, supported by standout performers Andrew Kingsbury and All-Americans Scott Hodinko and Noah Scheel.

In the lineup, the senior one-two punch of Justin Machita and Tanner Singh will set the tone, joined by proven talents like Scott Hodinko, Owen Mathes, Jake Benner, and Drew LaMonica, all aiming to build on their already impressive careers. The roster also gains additional firepower with new talent, namely Patrick Mannix, adding depth to an already powerful lineup.

Manager Quote:

“This team is extremely special. We feature 6 guys who now have two NCBA World Series Championships, along with another nine who now have one. What is even more special about this team is the culture that has been paved for this program, which is being steered by senior leadership. The culture that has been demonstrated is in no harm of changing. As new guys come in, they immediately pick up that this program is about winning. I cannot wait to watch our returning guys continue to have extremely successful careers and see some new opportunities for some guys this year to really break out and shine.”

2025 Spring Season Outlook: Although the Fall 2024 Season started on a high note as the team emerged victorious as the Charleston Fall Invitational champion, we finished in the conference standings below our expectations. To keep the goal of advancing to the North Atlantic Regional Tournament intact, our team will need to attain a high winning percentage in the 2025 Spring Season. This will be no easy feat as we face three conference series on the road against strong competition and the remainder of one conference series at home (where our team's margin of victory was one run in the first game of the series). Nevertheless, the team intends to learn from the highs and lows of the fall and pivot towards a strong showing in the spring.

Manager Quote: With our move this season to the North Atlantic Region – East Conference as part of the overall realignment in NCBA Division I, we knew that we were bound to face stronger competition and endure tougher odds to advance to the postseason. Despite our position in the conference standings at the end of the 2024 Fall Season, the resiliency demonstrated during the Charleston Fall Invitational along with the overall level of commitment and solidarity embodied by the team is encouraging. I have confidence that these attributes will fuel our preparation during the winter and put us in position to compete at a high level against our opponents in the spring as we pursue a postseason bid.

Manager Quote: We look to build on our successful fall season by continuing to play good baseball in the spring. A major part of this will be relying on our young position players who have joined the team and immediately made an impact. I think we are only going to get better as we play more games as a team and as some of our younger guys get more experience. Overall, I am very excited to see what our team does the rest of the year and am confident in our ability to make the regional tournament. – Frank Castrovinci
